

Grand Atlantic - 'How We Survive!' album tour

With high-potency riffs and an addictive pop melody, 'She's A Dreamer', the first release from Grand Atlantic's follow up to their acclaimed debut, marks the end of a productive 2008 and demonstrates a band capable of delivering on all the promise they displayed. The enthralling and mysterious new album, titled 'How We Survive', was mixed by Magoo (Midnight Oil, Powderfinger, Regurgitator) and mastered by Yes Master in Nashville for release June 13, 2009 on Laughing Outlaw (distribution via Inertia). It showcases the increased confidence that the band has in their songwriting, along with the influence of almost 18 straight months of live shows – gone are the overt influences of the debut, replaced with a cohesive and fully-formed power-pop vision.

Opening with the psychedelic guitar-overload of 'Coast Is Clear' (reminiscent of Swervedriver at their most accessible), the album moves through the radio-friendly stomp of 'Tripwires' and 'She's A Dreamer' into the lush and emotive title track. In places, glimpses of the band's love of '60's-flavoured pop shine through ('Used To Be The Sensitive Type'), in others it's a decidedly more post-punk influenced garage sound, while the whole album displays a devotion to the highest level of songwriting skills and production. Filled with hooky, jangling riffs and memorable melodies, this record is a tour de force of exceptionally strong songs and impassioned performances.

Grand Atlantic are primed to launch the new album in Victoria, New South Wales and Queensland throughout June, July and August. Look for them at a venue near you...

"Bands can sometimes do the big guitar pop-rock thing and sometimes do the orchestral pop thing, but somehow Grand Atlantic can do them both equally well and resolve them into an enthralling package"

- Noel Mengel, The Courier Mail
